

VISUALIZE GENDER INEQUALITY

Violence against women is a horrible human rights violation that still occurs across the globe. This dashboard looks at survey responses across 70 countries between the years 2000-2018. Participants from varying ages, marital statuses, and education levels provided responses on whether it was acceptable or not for husbands to beat their wives for varying reasons. The dashboard focuses on the median response in the age and education demographics. *Click on a country to filter survey results

"It is acceptable for a man to beat his wife if..."

AGE

At the median response level for all countries, the younger generation accepts violence against women more than older generations. As for education levels, it is clear that individuals with higher education levels have lower tolerance for violence against women.

EDUCATION